

WILD GEESE

In dark flight beating south they made
An etching thin and high—
I watched them in the early dusk
Go down the desert sky.

They left an arc of loneliness
To widen east and west,
An edge more piercing to the wind,
And winter in my breast.

From "The Collected Poems of Ada Hastings Hedges"
Published by the Oregon State University Press, Corvallis, Oregon